GOLD WASHINGTON, June 30 .- Europe exerted subtle pressures to make the Roosevelt administration change its course at London.

The threats it made against us publicly were mild compared with those made sotto voce. The pressure was so warm at one time Thursday that a definite course of European opposition was mapped out privately to our officials.

We were told in international whispers that France would probgo off gold, but that England would peg the pound with the franc and let us try to get along against that combination. The threats frightened some of the administration advisers They started talking about a compromise whereby we would accept

The Europeans would accept that only if Mr. Roosevelt would promise not to use the dollar revaluation power in the meantime.

The harassed experts left in Washington frankly conceded off the record that the situation was badly muddled. They gave up and looked to the Amberjack for the answer.

There is actually a shortage of certain kinds of labor in some cotton textile localities. The industry can stand higher wages That is why it was selected to lead the industrial recovery band.

PARODY The Otto Kahn hearing was only a state rehashing of the big Morgan show. It was staged because the Morgans had been privately assured they would not be left out in the heat alone. At least one of their competitors had to be fried publicly at the earliest possible moment.

The Muscle Men Are Ruling The New Era in Boxing A new era has come to boxing. And the experts may put on their little dunce caps and guess all they care to, but the guessing is to be tougher from now on out. Because the muscle men are ruling the game. The boxers are gone. Gene Tunney, lack Sharkey Max Schmeling W I.

are gone. Gene Tunney, Jack Sharkey, Max Schmeling, W. L. Stribling-all the boxers have been knocked right out of the picture by men with the punch.

And no man knows when or where the whistling punch is going to land. But all men know that when it lands it knocks an opponent stiff and horizontal.

And now we have Primo Carnera and Max Adelbert Baer. a couple of wild and enthusiastic swingers whose chief idea is to do one great bodily harm without any regard at all for the

You may have the new champion. All of him. There has been attached to his record since his start the aroma of something a bit unpleasant to the olfactory sense. And his manager is one of those well-known people. Mr. William Duffy is quite well known. Oh, Carnera's fights are always viewed with the yellow eye of suspicion. There is some excuse for it. There is some excuse for the boys with more sensitive noses being a bit suspicious about this one, although I am sure it must have been on the up and up.

Because it was just last winter that the crowd almost laughed Carnera out of the Garden as he floundered through a bout with Joese Santa, a palooka of purest ray serene. And it was just last summer that he barely got a decision over Hans Birkie, a comparative pigmy and no fighter to worry one.

It was thoroughly established that Carnera's left jab did Ernie Schaaf no harm, he having entered the ring for the fight out of condition and suffering from inflammation of the brain.

It was just that the punch came through to nail Sharkey on the jaw. And, as has been stated here before, when the punch comes whistling through all else is very null and void.

Having seen Carnera lose to Sharkey two autumns ago, I could not visualize him winning this summer. But he did. And so we have the two muscle men-the old order changeth, giving place to new. The poet sang along that line once, saying it was an excellent idea for this change to come less one custom should corrupt the world. But lack-a-day, mates, I fear this one much more.

But there they are—the muscle men—Baer and Carnera.

CALL HIM "MUSCLE-INI."

Mr. James Butler, one of our movie-men-about-town, call to suggest that Primo Carnera be called "Muscle-ini," and the name fits the big clown well.

Because Mussolini in Rome was said to be overjoyed that the big fellow from Venice had won the championship of the world. Primo represents the fas-

The name fits very well indeed because he was muscled into the prize ring industry; he is one of the chief muscle men, and he has been slapped verbally on the back with a long cable of congratulations from Mussolini,

THE NEXT BATTLE.

Interest centers about the new champion's next battle. His own handlers are still a bit wary, not knowing if he is an oaf or a real battler. The Carnera camp is broke and the Italian was recently adjudged bankrupt.

This may force them into a fight with Baer in the fall. Much depends on the attitude taken by the new heads of the Garden. If Joey Jacobs goes in a state of the same of the content of the cont heads of the Garden. If Joey Jacobs goes in as matchmaker, as is hinted, Jack Dempsey will be able to do business with the Garden for his man Baer.

But if there are enough fellows who will promise to be good, it is possible that Primo will be taken on tour like one of those captive whales, and exhibited about the country.

As a one-time circus man it grieves me to be unable to cheer for the new champion, who began his career as a freak in a circus.

But you may have the new champion-all of him. I wish Dempsey were 25 years old and could be turned into the same ring with him.

SAVOLDI LOSES.

One of the more amusing stories concerning the group of wrestlers opposed to Jim Londos and who manage to arrange for all their men, Savoldi, George, DeGlane, Lewis, Browning, Sonnenberg and others, to be "champions," comes out of Savoldi was wrestling one of his own group, a little-known wrestler named Sol Slagel. Slagel got busy and had Savoldi on the run. Those at the ringside declared they heard Savoldi say to his manager, "Get the match stopped or he'll throw me." At any rate, Savoldi left the ring and would not return, Slagel being given Savoldi's claim of a victory over Londos was well discredited at the time. The facts are that Jim Londos is the greatest wrestler in the game, probably the best one the game has ever had. He could toss Savoldi, George, Sonnenberg and that group in one evening.

NO NATURE LOVERS.

Harking back to the two muscle men, there will be no criticism of them on charges that they like rock gardens, and know how to pronounce the names of flowers.

Both Sharkey and Schmeling like flowers, birds and nature. They were men whose minds were foreign to the ring.

But Carnera and Baer like blonds and brunets best of all and as far as they know the only flowers in the world are those which come from the florist shops

Neither will offend, as Tunney did, by reading a

William F. Carey, president of Madison Square Garden since 1929, today confirmed reports current for some time that he had resigned his post, effective following the Jack SharkeyPrimo Carnera match last night.
He will be replaced by John Kilpatrick, once an outstanding end at Yale, now his assistant.
Carey told newspapermen today that he would leave the Garden next week and go to California for a vacation. His future plans he said, do not include entrance into the motion picture industry, as he had been previously reported.

These Pictures Tell Story of Fight *

One glance at this picture tells the full story of the Sharkey-Carnera fight. Grantland Rice said it was one of the greatest fights for six rounds he had ever seen. The former champion was outweighed nearly 60 pounds. Central Press photo.

Pete Susko, a former Baron, tripled in the eighth inning and scored on Chatham's freak hit over White's head for the only Cracker tally. White retired the first 17 batters to face him and Butcher's infield hit in the sixth broke up his perfect game. The Barons got two runs in the first when Braly singled, Abernathy walked and Weintraub scored them walked and Weintraub scored them with a triple. ## Kleinhans Far Ahead In Total Strikeouts

Cracker Star Well on Way to Leadership With 77 Victims; Reid Closest Pursuer.

Theodore (Hands) Kleinhans—the hands that support the Atlanta Angeles, fighting it out with diminus ackers—is well on his way to at least one league record. In fact, he going away, as the race writers say.

The pitcher's records, checked through Thursday's games, reveal that the compact Cracker left-hander is leading the league in Strikeouts versity of North Carolina, in straight with 77 and that the closest pursuer, Jackie Reid, of Nashville, is 14 sets, 10-8, 7-5, 6-2, while Murphy, behind him with a total of 63. At the pace Kleinhans is setting, and has set from the beginning, neither Reid nor any other league sharpath, University of Texas, seeded second, 6-4, 6-1, 6-3. shooter will eatch him between now and September.

The records further reveal that Har-ry Kelly, who has been the deadliest foe of the Crackers and a lot of other toe of the Crackers and a lot of other clubs, has only 51 strikeouts. Kleinhans had 71 up until Thursday's game against Birmingham, when he struck out six more to add to his total.

LEADS SHUTOUTS.

Kleinhans also is a league lead.

Kleinhans also is a league leader in two other departments. He has pitched the most shutouts—four—and White had no trouble through the first five innings and until after two were out in the sixth, not a man reached first when Butcher singled with two out. He struck out McKee and Bonowitz in the seventh. He also fanned Sington to start the eighth, but Susko tripled to deep center. Phillips popped to Cortazzo and Chatham knocked him in with a single that bounced over White's head and Cortazzo was unable to get it. McKee singled in the ninth after two were out for the fourth hit off White. Cortazzo and Bancroft got three has made the most wild pitches with sortie with lots of stuff is of necessity a trifle wild once in a while.

These figures, when combined with the fact that Kleinhaus ranks among the leaders with 11 wins and probably will finish up with one of the league, hears out the statement made to these pages not long ago that Kleinhaus is at he best pitcher in the league from a standpoint of natural stuff and all-around effectiveness. Zipp Newman, the statistical as well as the chronological virtuoso of the Birmingham News, has uncovered the fact that Duck McKee, the Atlanthe fact that. Duck McKee, the Atlan-ta rookie rightfielder, batted at a .524 clip against the Barons in the first half race, while hitting .281 against the other six clubs in the league. His fat average against the Baron pitch-ers, however, brought his composite average for the first half up to a neat .318. Yates Loses Control of Woods in Semi-Final Battle.

By Francis B. Cass.

WILLIAMSVILLE, N. Y., June 30.—(P)—Walter Emery, young University of Oklahoma sophomore, provided the biggest upset of the national intercollegiate golf championship today as he came from behind to defeat Charlie Yates, of Georgia Tech, 4 and 3, in the 36-hole semi-final round.

Trailing by one hole at the twenty-eventh, young Emery took five of the seventh, young Emery took five of the next six holes to gain the right to meet Rodney B. Bliss, of Cornell, for the title tomerrow. Bliss advanced to the finals by defeating Henry J. (Hank) Kowal, of Colgate, 2 and 1, in a tightly contested down.

DOWN AT STAKT.

Emery, who came out of the west a virtual unknown, lost the second hole to Yates' birdie 3 after they had halved the first in 4s and from there on he spent most of the day trying to overhaul the Georgian.

He was 2 down at the end of the first nine as the young Georgian went out in 35, one under par, and 1 down at the end of the eighteenth amd twenty-eighth with par 4s and then the Georgian began to crack and Emery continued the steady hard game he has played ever since the tournament opened.

Yates' drive at the twenty-ninth found a trap on the right and he put his second in a deep gully protecting the green. Emery played his second shot dead to the carpet and 2-putted for a 4 and a win. On the next, 155 yards over water to an elevated green, Emery again was safely on with his tee shot, while Yates'

WOODS GO BAD.

Yates seemed unable to control his wood shots on the next two holes and was in trouble off the tee on each hole, while Emery, playing safely into the wind, which reached gale proportions in the afternoon, managed to keep even with par figures and win the next two and the match.

The Bliss-Kowal match swung back and forth throughout the day.

Bliss proved superior in the finer points of the game and it was his approaching and putting which gave him the match.

Ken Holloway To Join Club at Chattanooga Today.

By Jimmy Jones.

Cutting short a visit to his south Georgia estate at Dover Hall, Presi-dent Wilbert Robinson, of the Atlan-ta baseball club, returned unexpected-ly to the city Thursday night and spent yesterday putting through some new moves that he hopes will be of

1. The appointment of Norman (Kid) Elberfeld, one of the Southern Whington league's most colorful figures in days past, as the club's scout for the remainder of the season. Elberfeld cancelled the second week of the baseball school he has been conducting at Ponce de Leon park and will take the road Sunday in search of new mate-rial for the club among the smaller

"Every club in the Southern league that is up in the race and which has been up in the race for several years, employs a scout and I decided that old Kid Elberfeld, with his knowledge of young ball players, could do us a lot of good; I'm going to send him out this week-end and when he gets back from south Georgia, I probably will send him into some of the Class B leagues north of here."

Elberfeld has planned to extend his baseball school for two weeks, but upon coming to terms with the Crack-er president, decided to dispense with the second week. The Atlanta club will be home next week anyway and there would be no room for the young-sters on the lot. Elberfeld says he has spotted some good-looking you in praise of Martin, a young catcher, who has been under his tutelage and a young right-handed pitcher.

Uncle Robby decided to send Elberfeld to scout several prospects in the Georgia State league instead of going there himself. He had planned to sit on a game between Macon and

The Two Survivors.

Just a year ago Max Schmeling and Jack Sharkey were the two heavyweights who dominated the main tent.

In less than a month both have been eliminated from the scene by the clubbing fists of Max Baer and Primo Carnera who had too wide a margin on the physical side. There is already an advance ripple of thrills over the prospect of peering at the two surviving giants who have a chance to bring back the the last eight of women's singles, first million-dollar gate since Dempsey and Tunney wound up the big American entrants in the Wimbledon money act at Chicago six years ago.

Sharkey went to the charge with fine ring spirit, giving all he had to give. He gave a brilliant exhibition of boxing and he looked like a champion up to the moment his face struck the canvas and the count began.

There were two factors that settled he issue even before big Carnera had Sharkey groggy through the sixth

The first shock to Sharkey came when he found that Carnera was now able to block the left hook that did so much damage in their first meeting. Sharkey threw one left after another, only to find a huge oak tree arm in the way.

The clumsy giant of two years ago ad come a long way, since their first had come a long way, since their had come a long way, since their meeting. He was no longer clumsy meeting. He was all about. The second shock came when Sharkey decided to gamble with his right. He missed more than one of these wild swings, but at least three landed solidly and heavily on Carnera's chin. And when they landed—much to Sharkey's stunned surprise—nothing happened except the appearance of a half-mocking grin on Carnera's massive frontispiece. If he had been intered in the surprise of the half-mocking grin or carnera's massive frontispiece.

Sharkey with a jolting body punch, and from that spot on through to the finish it was the Italian who took charge of the offensive details. He knocked Sharkey down with a blow that was half punch and half shove. Sharkey was up, but it was not the same Sharkey who came back to fight

It was a Sharkey who had lost all his early steam, a half-groggy, partly-dizzy Sharkey who no longer had full possession of his mental faculties or his physical actions. . . . The somewhat dazed and disman-led Sharkey was now onen to the

It is a long way from Car-nera's knee to Sharkey's chin, and the uppercut was whistling by the time it landed with a thud that sounded like thunder across the Long Island land-

It came at a time when Sharkey had shot his bolt—at a time when Sharkey knew there could be only one finish against an opponent who shed rights to the jaw as a concrete roof sheds an April shower.

Fast Action.

Sharkey lost no time at all in surging to the attack, and you could see each time he threw a full left or right that he had the knockout idea in his head. He threw these punches with every-thing he had—ducking and weav-ing with an elastic body that was rarely at rest. He was the Sharkey who tore into

He was the Sharkey who tore into Jimmy Maloney and Harry Wills, the Sharkey who attempted to knock out Jack Dempsey in one round—a Sharkey out on a rampage, ready to gamble to the last rap.

But he was meeting an opponent who had improved immensely in two years—a far different Carnera from the man he knocked down and beat up two years ago. Carnera was not only knocked down and beat up two years ago. Carnera was not only a far better boxer than be had been before, but he was also much harder to hit and much harder to hurt. He had been seasoned and toughened in more than 250 rounds since his first chance against the Boston fighter. fighter.
When Carnera proved that he knew how to block most of Sharkey's dan-

Sharkey had gambled on a fast, rushing attack and he would have been worn down in another round or two, even if Carnera had missed those sixth-round punches. Yet Sharkey can feel in defeat that he lost the title after one of the best fights he ever fought. He lost as a champion should lose.

This brought the story home to Sharkey with only one possible finish. He couldn't knock Carnera out, and he couldn't hold this fast pace much longer against such heavy physical odds. Yet if he had elected to box more carefully he would have traveled the last five rounds on sagging legs. Subconsciously, Sharkey must have known he was beaten after the fifth round when he had fired every shot in his arsenal, only to have the enemy still standing up and willing to fight back.

The Big Change.

The Big Change.

This was the main reason for the big change that took place in the sixth round. Up to this point Sharkey was far in front on points. He had outboxed and outpunched his massive rival through a series of attacks that rarely halted.

When the sixth round opened he still continued his first plan, only to catch a left and a right on head and body.

With the international match between Great Britain anad the United States at Contract Bridge just around the corner, the interest of players in the respective skill of representatives of the two nations naturally is very keen. I have received a great many letters asking me my opinion of the outcome of the match to be played in London. Naturally I have every confidence in the accurate bidding and skillful play of the American team, otherwise I would not have selected them to accompany me. On the other hand, I have the greatest respect for the English Bridge players as players, and since they have adopted correct systems of bidding for reaching correct contracts, I believed they will give a good account of themselves in the forthcoming contest. In fact, it need surprise no one if they should win.

One of the greatest weaknesses of the British teams when the matches were played in 1930 was the lack of any systematic bidding and an adherence to what they termed "Common Sense." A rose by any other mane smells just as sweet, so we are told, but common sense as used by system mongers who make a system of being unsystematic carries no particular signifance.

males, cling to the latter, and in time become permanent and insignificant appendages of the females.

"In this odd design for living in the deep several males may be attached to one female, but in the model just received only one male is shown. As it happens, he hangs on for life above his 'wife's' left eye, close to, but safe from, her cavernous mouth with its rows of needle-like teeth."

Dr. Gregory said that little is known about the species, but the theory has been advanced that the ma-

"And he hangs on with building grip, the male is gradually transformed into a quasi-parasite and becomes attached to her for life. For their maters the mule is and becomes attached to her for life. For that matter, the male is at no time able to support himself. Ichthyologists, Dr. Gregory explained, think that nature chose this state of semi-parasitism to insure perpetuation of the species. Before this solution of the problem the chance of one of these fish finding lone wandering females in the dark spaces of the great deep were extremely slim.

"But what the ichthyologists have not explained," said the curator, "is how or why such a meek

Now, is there any reason for worry about the men whom nature has equipped with such remarkable powers of adaptation to changed conditions? True, they may suffer the pangs of hurt pride when their wives earn more and consequently insist on having the last word as to how the earnings shall be spent.

Unquestionably the men were happier under the old regime when nobody challenged their right to rule, with iron hand, the women and children in their homes. But they paid a price for their sovereignty, a price that often taxed their moral bank accounts. Relieved of their scepters, they are relieved of a good many irksome responsibilities, So long as their mates covet the privilege of shouldering these responsibilities and prove themselves canable of carrydering these responsibilities and prove themselves capable of carrying the burdens, the men are finding compensatory pleasure in their new positions.

"Here, stop it!" Papa Marat commanded. He leaped into the stream. "Stop it, I say. Here I'll help you lift him out of the water. He's nearly gone now. We won't want another killing."

Papa Marat looked up suddenly from the prostrate Quirt. "Thought you had what?" he demanded

"Somebody's broken the lock," he remarked.

Virginia half whispered, "Sprague."
Papa Marat, in the act of flashing his light about the interior, stopped to ask, "Sprague? He was out here then?"
"Yes," she said. "Last night. He came and called Quirt—several times. Then he called me. But I was under there. I couldn't answer!"
Papa Marat had discovered the light and turned it on. The cottage, like most of those near the city, had electric lights, but it was almost unfurnished. The room they were in contained an old iron bed with a lot of old blankets piled on it, an oil stove, an oil-cloth covered table piled with tin plates and old chipped dishes, and rickety old reed chair. The oil stove at last yielded to Papa Marat's efforts and as a small blue flame appeared he took coffee from a can, which Manning handed him, and dipped water from a pail into the percolator.

He placed the coffee pot on the fire, and settled himself in the wobbly old reed chair.

"And now," he said, "while we wait for the coffee to boil. I'd like to ask the young lady a few questions."

"She's not able to answer ques-tions now," Manning protested. "Let

NEW YORK, June 30.—(P)—

Financiel m. rkets turned the page on a strenuous half year with a general net appreciation in grain and security prices as the day's contribution to accomplishments of the last six months.

Stocks drifted lazily lower until nftc-noon when rails led a rally that helped other divisions. Grains were stronger on reports that recent northwestern showers had not checked crop damage; bonds improved. Foreign exchanges got a respite, doubtless because the market heard that something was in the wind regarding efforts to curtail sweeping fluctuations. Until the late rally, stocks moved higher only in spots. Canada Dry, American Rolling Mill. Homestake, Hercules Powder, McIntyre, Dome, Crown Cork and a few coppers were favorites, some of them doing extremely well. When virtually all the leading carrier issues took a spurt than 4, favorites, some of them doing extremely well. When virtually all the leading carrier issues took a spurt that netted gains of 1 to more than 4, lagging industrials firmed.

American Telephone and Public Service of New Jersey added more than a point otherwise utilities were sluggish. 'ransactions totaled 3,700,720 shares, the week's smallest turnover. Carrier equities had their lift in advance of the weekly carloadings statement which appeared just at the close instead of on Saturday, as is usual. This report showed an increase of 16,737 cars over the previous week for the week ended June 24 and the large appreciation of 105,675 cars over a year ago, the latter gain abounting to 21.1 per cent. Total traffic was 604,668 cars, the first time volume had topped 600,000 since October, 1931.

Current business reviews comment

October, 1931.

Current business reviews comment on the proportions which the trade recovery has assumed as industry moves into the second half of 1933. The National City bank's survey of conditions believes that the direct effect of dollar depreciation has been "very limited," and calls the improvement since mid-March "the most impressive showing" ever witnessed in the United States in a comparable period. Dun & Bradstreet's weekly analysis says the momentum of the upswing is "doubtless without parallel in the history of the country," asserting that some trades are now feeling an install shortage of goods.

Transactions on the Stock Exchange in June established a high record for that month at 125.619,530 shares. It was also a new high level for any month during a bull market. Transactions averaged 4,831.520 shares daily with a peak of 6.877,860 shares. The smallest daily turnover during the month was 3,314,100 shares.

LATE RALLY AIDS SHARES ON CURB

By BERNARD S. O'HARA. NEW YORK, June 30.—(P)—The curb market milled about in quiet trading today to record unimportant changes, except in some of the mining shares and a few specialties. Prices were irregularly higher at the finish. late buying having carried the mar-ket upward from a reaction in the ket upward from a reaction in the forenoon.

Distillery issues were again rather quiet. Distillers Corporation-Seagrams lost nearly a point while others showed scant change. Utilities were generally steady to fractionally higher, while oils were in better demand than in recent sessions. Humble Oil rose a point but other gains were mostly of fractional proportion.

Safety Car Heating soared 10 1-2 points in a small turnover. Glen Alden Coal and Pan-American Airways rose about 2 points each while National Steel Car and Sherwin-Williams were reactionary. The Celanese issues were rather heavy.

In the mining group Lake Shore and Newmont firmed around 2 points each. Pioneer Gold was a shade higher. Transfers totaled 515,000 shares compared with 582,000 Thursday.

DAYTONA BEACH MAYOR MUST SIGN BOND ACT

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., June 30.—
(P)—The supreme court today issued peremptory writ of mandamus ordering Mayor E. H. Armstrong, of Daytona Beach, to sign certain municipal refunding bonds issued by the city of Daytona Beach under authority of 1931 legislative act.

The mayor refused to sign the bonds and the city brought action to force him to act, claiming it was his duty to sign as a city official. The court in upholding the city's contention said the mayor had no veto power on the matter and must do his duty.

McD fie pointed out that he supported in congress all steps intended to strengthen the cause of prohibition. "but now I feel that after many years of trial and expenditure of millions in attempted enforcement, national prohibition has failed."

tinued closing in upon the ape-man. All of which Tarzan, standing quietly behind the tree, was aware of. His face alert, he stood for several seconds listening. . . . Suddenly there came a loud scream from the girl.

At Jean's scream, Tarzan moved out from behind the tree and looked excitedly. The three men wheeler about abruptly and, to their horror, saw a large ape with Jean in his arms, swinging up into one of the trees and disappearing. All three raised their rifles but hesitated to fire.

Once more Tarzan uttered his cry, this time exultantly! He swung up the tree behind which he had been standing. Hearing that ringing call, the white men turned about to see the ape-man disap-pearing. Holt raised his rifle and fired rapidly twice in succession.
